

The diagram features a thick black vertical bar centered on the page. Below the bar, a grid of rectangular cells is arranged in two horizontal rows. The top row consists of four gray cells: the first is a single column wide, the second is two columns wide, the third is three columns wide, and the fourth is a single column wide. The bottom row consists of four cells: the first is a single column wide, the second is a single column wide, the third is two columns wide, and the fourth is a single column wide. The black bar overlaps the middle of the grid, passing through the second and third columns of both rows.
